About

Anthony's practice focuses on representing retail and institutional investors in securities class actions and other shareholder rights litigation. He has been counsel to the class in a number of domestic and cross-border securities class actions alleging misrepresentations in prospectuses, continuous disclosure and merger transaction documents, and other misconduct.

Anthony also has experience prosecuting complex price-fixing class actions.

Anthony is passionate about his practice as a class action lawyer at Siskinds: "Since their introduction in Canada, class actions have been an enormously powerful tool in providing access to justice to Canadians. Class actions have resulted in compensation being paid to Canadians to rectify a wide range of harmful behaviour. I am extremely proud to be a part of the Siskinds team that has been at the vanguard of the development of this area."

He understands the value of securities class actions to his clients. "All Canadians have an interest in ensuring that our capital markets operate in a fair and transparent manner. The value of their investments held in trading accounts, retirement savings plans and pension funds are impacted when companies in which they have placed their trust and money engage in misconduct. Class actions are vital in providing compensation when that happens and in deterring other companies from engaging in similar behaviour."
