About

Paul has been practicing civil litigation for over 35 years. As a partner in Siskinds' civil litigation group, Paul has successfully represented clients before the Superior Court of Justice, the Ontario Court of Appeal, and the Federal Court of Canada, as well as many provincial tribunals and licensing boards. His multifaceted practice is focused on representing and advising institutions, municipalities, business owners, and private individuals. Paul's representation of private individuals has included enforcing and protecting the rights of individuals under insurance and employment contracts, as property owners, as individuals with entitlements under trusts, wills and estates, and as the victims of abuse or other wrongs. He also prosecutes and defends negligence, property damage and economic loss claims. He has taught civil procedure as an adjunct professor at Western University's Faculty of Law.

Publications and Speaking

Paul has taught as an adjunct professor at the Faculty of Law at Western University and has been a presenter at programs run by the Advocates Society, Elder Abuse London Middlesex, the Ontario Association of Social Workers and the Credit Institute of Canada. He is a past instructor at the Law Society of Ontario Bar Admission Course, the Canadian Institute of Management and the Institute of Law Clerks of Ontario.
