About

Educated in both the United States and Canada, Savvas understands the subtle legal nuances between the legal systems of the two countries. During law school, Savvas was an active member of the competitive moot program, specifically in international trade law, and he gained valuable experience working at a personal injury firm and summering and articling at Siskinds.

Since law school, Savvas has narrowed his interests in advancing the interests of entrepreneurs. He has a keen interest in providing practical advice and walking businesses through the complex, cross-border web of laws and regulations. Savvas focuses on general corporate, commercial, trade, privacy, cybersecurity, data security, and biometric privacy matters.

In his spare time, Savvas likes reading the news every morning with his coffee, playing rapid chess, and going to the gym.
